Abstract

This study is about the use of commissive speech acts used by presidential candidates Anies Baswedan, Prabowo Subianto and Ganjar Pranowo. This research aims to find the subtype of commissive speech acts used by presidential candidates and the most dominant subtype of commissive speech acts used by presidential candidates. The method used is Descriptive Qualitative Method. The data of this research are utterances that contain commissive speech acts. The data source is the video of the presidential candidates' debate. The instruments of this research are observation and documentation. The researcher used the theory of Miles, Huberman & Saldana (2014) to analyze the data and obtained the results that in the presidential candidate debate commissive subtypes were found, that is 5 subtypes of the 9 commissive subtypes proposed by Searle and Vanderveken (1985), the 5 subtypes were 31 promises, 1 commit, 1 threaten, 1 accept and 1 pledge. And the most dominant subtype in the presidential candidate debate is promise with a percentage calculation of 88.5% promise, 2.8% commit, 2.8% threaten, 2.8% accept and 2.8% pledge.

Introduction

Debate is an activity in which two individuals or two groups argue about something. A debate is a structured conversation about a certain topic that takes place in a legislative assembly or public forum. It often involves the presenting of competing viewpoints and concludes with a vote. A debate is an argument, particularly one conducted formally, on a topic.

Indonesia held a presidential and vice presidential debate once every five years, that was when the president changed. Therefore, this year Indonesia was holding a massive democracy party. The general election was held on February 14, 2024. All Indonesian people were obliged to participate in choosing presidential and vice presidential candidates. The presidential and vice presidential candidates took part in the debate held by the General Election Commission (KPU) via electronic media directly. Each candidate must convey their vision and mission to the public through the media, both electronic media, print media, and social media so that the public knows their vision and mission. Presidential candidates are public figures or figures who are widely recognized by the general public so that people will focus on them. What is seen from them is the use of subtypes of commissive speech acts.

Speech acts are divided into several parts, one of which is commissive acts. The action taken in saying something is a speech act according to Austin in Pipit (2023). In speech act, people are not only producing the utterances that contain grammatical structure and words, but also they are performing the actions by the utterances. This means that the speaker not only conveys the message but also establishes a social relationship with the listener. According to Yule (1996) and Syafryadin (2022) state that several types of speech acts that must be noticed by the speaker that is locution, illocution, and perlocution.

According to Searle and Vanderveken (1985) there are five types of illocutions, that is assertive, commissive, directive, declarative and expressive. Then Searle and Vanderveken (1985) divides commissive into nine subtypes, that is, promise, guarantee, threaten, commit, accept, pledge, vow, consent, and covenant. A promise is an announcement to the audience that the speaker will do something specific later on. A speaker says that you will do something or that they are responsible for something is called a guarantee. Threaten is speech that contains a warning to the listener. Commit means the speaker is committed to doing something. The speaker accepts to take action in the future is called accept. Pledge is a pledge that does not necessarily have to be an effort to support or challenge the listener. The speaker swears to do something is called a vow. Agreeing to do something means receiving directions to do it, which is called consent. Then, the mutual agreement between the speaker and the listener is called a covenant.

Commissive is a statement that contains future action. The public can see the vision and mission of the candidates in the debate and see how often the candidates make statements that mean that the speaker will do something in the future. That way, the public will know the plans they will achieve when elected as leader so that it meets the voters' criteria.

This study focuses on presidential candidates' use of commissive speech acts during debates. Speech actions are employed in politics to gain political support; such as in the presidential candidate debates held in Indonesia. Each candidate must provide strong arguments in the form of speech acts to give confidence to their supporters to win the 2024 presidential election. Presidential candidates are public figures or figures who are widely recognized by the general public so that people will focus on them. What they researched was the use of subtypes of commissive speech acts.

The first, third, and fifth debates are used as the topics of this research. The first debate discussed government, law, human rights, eradicating corruption, promoting democracy, improving public services and citizen harmony. Then, the third debate discussed Defense, Security, International Relations and Geopolitics. Then the fifth debate discussed Social Welfare, Culture, Education, Information Technology, Health, Employment, Human Resources and Inclusion. From these three debates, the public knows how they think about each candidate. They argue with each other using their words which are influenced by their ideology.

This research was conducted inseparably from the results of previous studies as comparison material. The research results used as comparison cannot be separated from the topic, that is commissive speech acts. Based on the results of research conducted by (Mahar Ditriwan et al., 2023), this research is about the Commissive Illocutionary Act Used in Turning Red Movie. This study's objectives are to categorize the many commissive illocutionary acts that the characters in the film Turning Red employ. The data source is the film Turning Red. The data in this investigation were analyzed using the descriptive qualitative approach. This research uses the theory of Searle & Vanderveken (1985). The most dominant commissive subtype in this research is Promise.

The second research is research by (Samosir & Afriana, 2023), entitled "Commissive Speech Act in Movie 'Army of the Dead' 2021". The purpose of this study is to identify the types commissive speech acts in the film "Army of the Dead." 2021. This study classified the utterances that occurred in the data source into the various forms of commissive speech acts using Searle and Vanderveken's idea of the commissive speech act. Merriam's descriptive qualitative research approach was used in this study since the data were expressed as words and phrases. The data for this study were gathered using Creswell's observational approach. The observational method, according to Creswell (2014), is a technique in which the researcher watches and gathers data on the study object.

Literature Review

2.1 Pragmatics

According to Yule in (Wicaksono, 2018) state that pragmatics is the study of speaker meaning.

The study of pragmatics is the expression of relative distance, the study of contextual meaning, and the study of how more is conveyed than is said. Furthermore, according to Crysta in (Fa'adillah Mustakim & Weda, 2022) the study of pragmatics focuses on the variables that influence our language choices in social situations and how those choices affect other people.

Pragmatics is a branch of linguistics. According to (Fitria, 2019) states that the field of pragmatics studies how both the speaker and the listener make understandable statements.

Meanwhile, (Wicaksono, 2018) states that the study of pragmatics examines how language is employed in communication. Thus, the speaker's meaning or how meaning is expressed depending on its context is what pragmatics studies. In line with Nurul's (2021) opinion, pragmatics is the study of the link between language and the current cultural setting. It implies that without context, it will be challenging for the audience to grasp what the speaker is saying.

2.2 Speech Act

Speech acts are first introduced by Austin and then developed further by his student Searle. According to Austin in (Attamimy et al., 2020), A speech that incorporates action in communication while taking the speech's circumstances and context into account is called a speech act. When someone talks, there are a lot of things to consider, such the person speaking (the speaker), the person speaking about (the speech partner), the speech's purpose (the speaker's aim), and the speech's impact (its effect).

2.3 Commissive

According to (Tastier & Rohmah, 2023), state that commissive act is the speaker promises to do something in the future. The speaker's resolve to take action is the commissive e.g. promise, threaten, guarantee, commit, accept, pledge, vow, consent and covenant in a certain future.

There are nine subtypes of commissive, that are:

1. Promise

A promise is an assertion made to someone about what the speaker will do in the future. It is intended to be advantageous to the reader. In line with the opinion of (Farwati & Sofeny, 2023), who states that a promise is something that will be done, indicating that the aim is to eliminate the listener's doubts.

2. Guarantee

A guarantee is made when someone agrees to be legally accountable for something, guarantees that something will happen, or makes a commitment to do something. The speaker's emphasis on something's constative nature gives guarantee its force. A useful method for differentiating between a promise and a guarantee is an affirmation level. A guarantee is typically more solid than a simple promise. The speaker persuades the reader of something under promise.

3. Threaten

Speech acts of this type differ from promises. Threaten is a commissive action in which the speaker tells the hearer that the speaker will cause harm or trouble if the hearer does not do as the speaker wants.

4. Commit

Commit means an utterance in which the speaker commits to doing something in the future.

5. Accept

Accept is a speech act in which the speaker accepts in order to take action in the future.

Accept is used to handle the acceptance of an offer, invitation, or proposal made by the speaker.

6. Pledge

A pledge is a speech act where the pledge does not have to be an attempt to support or challenge the listener.

7. Vow

Vow is a speech act in which the speaker swears to do something.

8. Consent

e-ISSN: 2686-1526

Agreeing to do something means receiving directions to do it, which is called consent.

9. Covenant

Utterance that means mutual agreement between the speaker and the listener is called a covenant.

Research Method

In this research, the researcher used a qualitative descriptive method to describe the use of commissive speech acts contained in presidential candidate debates on the Kompas TV channel on YouTube. According to Virginia and Ambalegin (2021), "qualitative research is applied to get a specific and complete understanding of the phenomenon in society." The researcher used qualitative descriptive methods because the data in this study are utterances containing commissive speech acts contained in a presidential candidate debate, not in the form of numbers.

The subject in this research are the three presidential candidates that were Anis Baswedan, Prabowo Subianto and Ganjar Pranowo. The object in this research is utterances containing commissive speech act in presidential candidate debate.

This research used observation and documentation as instruments for collecting the data. The observation carried out by the researcher was watching the debate. After making observations by watching the presidential candidate's debate. Researcher carry out documentation by photographing commissive speech acts in debate.

The technique of collecting data is implemented by doing several steps.

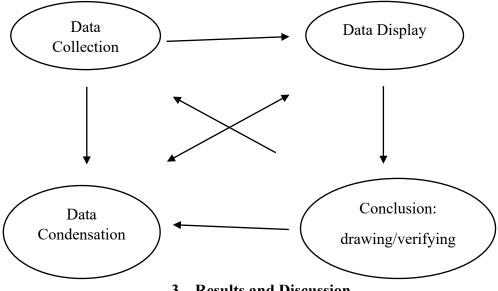

103

- 1. Downloading a video of a presidential candidate's debate on the Kompas TV channel on YouTube.
- Then watching the videos
- Transcribing spoken text to written text
- 4. Collecting the utterance of commissive speech acts.

In analyzing data, researcher used the theory put forward by (Miles et al., 2014) that qualitative data analysis consists of three processes. The process are Data Condensation, Data Display, and Conclusion drawing/verifying.

3. Results and Discussion

Researcher analyzed data using the theory of Mile, Huberman, and Saldana (2014). There are three processes in analyzing data: the first is data condensation, consisting of several steps, namely selecting, focusing, simplifying, abstracting, and transforming; the second is data display; and the last is conclusion drawing or verification.

Conclusion

Commissive act is the speaker promises to do something in the future. The speaker's resolve to take action is the commissive. According to Searle and Vanderveken there are nine subtypes of commissive act that is promise, threaten, guarantee, commit, accept, pledge, vow, consent and covenant in a certain future. The data source for this research is a video of the presidential candidate's debate. The first debate was held on December 24 2023 with the theme "government, law, human rights, eradicating corruption, promoting democracy, improving public services and citizen harmony", the third debate was held on January 07 2024 with the theme "Defense, Security, International Relations and Geopolitics, and the fifth debate was held on February 4 2024 with the theme "Social Welfare, Culture, Education, Information Technology, Health, Employment, Human Resources and Inclusion" which was published on the Kompas TV channel on YouTube. Researchers found 36 data. The finding of this study is 31 promises, 1 commit, 1 threaten, 1 accept, and 1 pledge.

The percentage of this study is 88,5% of promise, 0% of guarantee, 2,8% of threaten, 2,8% of commit, 2,8% of accept, 2,8% of pledge, 0% of vow, 0% of consent and 0% of covenant. Promise is a commissive subtype that is most often used by presidential candidates in the first, third and fifth debates that have been studied by researchers accounting for 88% of commissive subtypes. This is influenced by getting people's votes so that they often produce promise words to attract the attention of listeners so that listeners sympathize with the speakers.
